TRENDS

- Voice continues to be a critical element of customer care –average call handle times keep growing as tougher calls reach agents; most people 51 and over prefer voice and in-person channel

- Research highlights it's about taking the right time, not the lowest time; this ultimately reduces customer effort and perceptions on ease of resolution

- Delivering Omnichannel Service is Key
  - 61.3% are adopting a fragmented approach to defining customer journeys and designing CX
  - 75.5% acknowledge partial or no consistency of CX services
  - Just 33.6% have a strategy to connect relevant contact channels

- New channels
  - Email has surpassed telephone to emerge as the #1 most-offered CX support channel
  - AI, instant messaging and robotics/proactive automation are the three hot trends for future needs
  - Most under 25 prefer self-serve/automated channels

- Employee engagement
  - AI to help them do their jobs better (RPA assists) and training (perhaps using gaming technology, flex times, WFH)

CHANNEL PREFERENCES BY ENQUIRY TYPE

Which contact channels are preferred by enquiry type?
Automated and assisted-service have become the preferred channel options for most transactions

> Telephone remains the preferred choice for retention, escalations, disputes and proactive sales; full automation is favored for order management and identification and verification

SECTION 5: GROWTH STRATEGY DIALOGUE

SUMMARY & RECOMMENDATIONS

- Strengths
  - Excellent CSAT scores - once customers are interacting with agents, they are very happy
  - Uses gaming to help with training
  - Transformative technologies such as chatbots, AI on the roadmap
  - On-line payment, stop service capability on digital channel
  - Predictive dialers are used to deflect calls during outages

- Challenges
  - Outsourcer needs to provide knowledge-based agents
  - Short-staffed 40 reps at a time handling 6000 interactions a day; 700 emails a data handled by 6 people – long response times via email; 2 people on social (Twitter, Facebook) so customers are not directed to these sites for information
  - Budget for CX is tough during pandemic – biggest challenge
  - Social media strategy does not have a structure yet, but working on a plan

- Opportunities
  - Customers went to social media on their own accord when they couldn't get through on other channels.

SUMMARY & RECOMMENDATIONS

- Recommendations

    - Client is aware of the need to make changes to the contract with the outsourcer so that their partner can better meet the conditions, metrics and obligations agreed on; regulatory issues and knowledge-base are key requirements that must be met.

    - Agent shortages due to COVID-19 are unforeseen circumstances; self-serve should accelerated

    - Chatbots can be used beyond responding to FAQ and routing; they can assist agents with relevant information at their fingertips to deliver quicker and better service.

    - Social media integration could be valuable. Reviews and community forums are important to listen to and obtain feedback.

    - Proactive texts may be a far better approach to notifying people of outages than home phones. Integration with mobile devices will be the key for successful customer care over the next few years.

    - Consider metrics that have a near-term impact on your company. Metrics vary by industry, and some are not meaningful.

    - Email response time must be decreased; customers may use that channel, but they expect quick responses. Automating responses intelligently can be an option when there is budget. Sending a link to a FAQ page within the automated email sent back to customers to inform them that the communication was received may help to resolve some issues with self-serve. This requires a close look at designing an FAQ page that can clearly help resolve issues.

    - Enable digital channels to be more interactive so customers can find answers to problems without having to reach out. Chat is a viable option.
